offenses against it. Obviously, these powers given to the national government over interstate commerce and in respect to the transportation of the mails, are not dormant and unused. Congress had taken hold of these two matters and by serious and specific acts had assumed and exercised the powers given to it, and was in full discharge o its duty to regulate interstate commerce and carry the mails. If the inhabitants of a single state or a great body of them should combine to obstruct interstate commerce, or the transportation of the mails, prosecutions of such offenses had in such a community would be doomed in advance to failure. And if the certainty of such failure was known and the national government had no other way to enforce the freedom of interstate commerce and the transportation of mails than by presecution and punishment for interference therewith, the whole interest of the nation in these respects would be at the absolute mercy of a portion of the inhabitants of a single state.

that Cornell stands a good chance of winning a race. She will not meet a typical college crew, which will make her chances so much more favorable. Concerning his observations of boat-ing matters on the other side, Mr. Cook says:

Cook says:

"The Englishmen are not interested in Cornell. They told me that they had more fear for the German eight this year than from any other eight this year than from any other crew they would have to compete with. While I think Cornell ought to have a good chance to win at Henley, I don't admit Cornell's superiority to Ya'e oarsmen. We do not care to row Cornell every year, but now that she feels that she has a good arew, I for my part, would just as soon row her a race for the purpose of easing her mind about it, either before she goes to England or when she reshe goes to England or when she re-turns to this country. That would settle all this talk all the while going on about Cornell's fast crew for once and forever, I believe."

service he rendered to the country was the reestablishment of the fast mails. Exact and Equal Justice.

As secretary of state in the present administration, Mr. Gresham has had to deal with perhaps more vexatious, intricate and delicate diplomatic affairs than has fallen to the share of most secretaries of state. From his long judicial experience he was disposed to view every question from the standpoint of exact and equal justice, and the first consideration with him was always absolute fairness; if his own country occupied a faise position in the matter he thought it was his duty to set it right, even at a sacrifice of material interests as POLYGAMY IN INDIA.

Polygamy In the Presbyterian Assembly.

At a sacrifice of material interests as at a sacrifice of material interests as it might appear at the time.

Such a course was certain to subject him to public criticism, and he fully realized this in advance, but was in no respect deterred from doing what he thought was right. This brought him face to face with the great question of the bour at that thus the analysis.

Secretary Gresham was also using his good offices to prevent a war between Mexico and Guatemala, both full of fighting spirit and difficult of restraint, and in this he succeeded completely, although he was obliged to use very strong representations to do so. While the amount of money involved was insignificant in the case of the claims of the United States eltizens against Venezuela, Secretary Gresham managed through a joint commission to secure a judicial an-nunciation of a doctrine that is of the

But the Americanism of the secretary was shown in its brightest light in three incidents that occurred during his administration, and the fact in two of the three he had to contend with great powers indicates that he made no distinction when the time came to claim rights for his own country. The first of these cases, while attracting little attention at the time, was really of great importance, for it amounted to a declaration to Europe that the United States would not permit private claims to be collected from American republics where our citizent had pecuniary interests. This was the case at San Domingo, when the French warship which had come there to enforce the collection of a private claim was windrawn after a very strong hint from Secretary Gresham, conveyed through Ambassador Eustis, that the United States would regard such a course as an unfriendly manifestation.

it is now clear that Secretary Gresham was brought to his last lilness by the great exertions he was obliged to put forth to discharge his official duties to his own satisfaction.

During his career on the bench, Judge diresham heard and decided many noteworthy cases His greatest decision was in the Wabash case, when he went beneath technicalities and placed all the lines of the system under a receiver, thus giving Jay Gould a direct blow.

In 1858, Mr. Gresham married Miss Matilida MoGrain, the daughter of Thomas McGrain, a man of Scotch-Irish descent. A son and daughter were born to them, who live in Chicago. He was devoted to his wife and children. This side of his life the public knew nothing of, but it turnishes the best key to his nature and character.

Supply Decreasing.

Even with this combination in effect the fish have been killed off from year to year so that the supply is surely decreasing at a great rate.

The greater part of the catch is made at the mouth of the Karluk river. Experts of the fish commission assert that the kinds of solnes used, operate to bar the way so effectually, one being placed behind another, that practically all of the fish are caught at the mouths of the rivers. Thus they are prevented from reaching their spawning grounds, and their reproduction is prevented.

It was only after the salmon fisheries of the Columbia and other Facific rivers had been greatly overworked, that resort was had to the products of Alaskan rivers. The government was awakened at a late day to its negligence in falling to restrict fishermen of Oregon and Washington. Now a weekly closed season kin effect on the waters of these states. For any continuity for enterprise in the development of new fisheries.

The fish commission has collected much information concerning the food fish of Alaska, which shows that there are many undeveloped fisheries for the future.
